

“Commands for the Last Days”
1 Peter 4:7-11

Two thousand years have passed since Peter wrote “the end of all things is at hand,” and still life continues to move on. But the Lord’s coming remains imminent, and Christians must live in light of it. In today’s passage, Peter not only speaks about the urgency of the moment, but also issues four commands to be obeyed.

I. Stay alert in the spirit of prayer (v. 7).

II. Remain fervent in your love for one another (v. 8).

III. Be hospitable to one another (v. 9).

IV. Use your gifts for God’s glory (v. 10-11).

Conclusion:

The end of all things is at hand. At any moment, Jesus Christ could return for us and catch us up in the air to be with Him, setting in motion all of the other events that have been prophesied in Scripture. In light of this fact, are you living as you ought to be living? Are you taking full advantage of the time that God has given us to serve Him and serve others?

“Commands for the Last Days”
1 Peter 4:7-11

Two thousand years have passed since Peter wrote “the end of all things is at hand,” and still life continues to move on. But the Lord’s coming remains imminent, and Christians must live in light of it. In today’s passage, Peter not only speaks about the urgency of the moment, but also issues four commands to be obeyed.

I. Stay alert in the spirit of prayer (v. 7).

II. Remain fervent in your love for one another (v. 8).

III. Be hospitable to one another (v. 9).

IV. Use your gifts for God’s glory (v. 10-11).

Conclusion:

The end of all things is at hand. At any moment, Jesus Christ could return for us and catch us up in the air to be with Him, setting in motion all of the other events that have been prophesied in Scripture. In light of this fact, are you living as you ought to be living? Are you taking full advantage of the time that God has given us to serve Him and serve others?